The police seem to do a good job with crime, however, the enforcement of traffic laws is pathetic. I frequently note speeds in excess of 45 mph in 30 zones, lack of right-turn-on-red stops, intentional running of stop signs and lights, driving in bike lanes, etc. Rochester appears to be a free driving zone where anything is allowed.

Homeless drug addicts need a place to be jailed. Offer them treatment and a halfway house to get clean. Much prefer this than to an expanded shelter. Thousands of square feet of defunct big box stores to choose from for a treatment centers and half way houses. Rochester can be a model for a country to deal with these addicts.

The police force does a great job enforcing and with outreach. I understand many traffic violations go unnoticed, but the force cannot be everywhere and education is the best solution in that field.
